Publishing with us

AIATSIS is accepting research work for publication in the areas of land rights and native title, Indigenous studies including history, anthropology, cultural, colonial and legal studies, education, governance, linguistics and health. Our research publications are online and the majority are open-access. Some of our books and research reports are available in hardcopy and can be purchased via our online shop.

What we publish

Australian Aboriginal Studies is a subscription-based interdisciplinary academic journal promoting high-quality research in Australian Indigenous studies, with a focus on the humanities and social sciences. All papers are peer-reviewed by two independent experts. Preferred length is between 5000 and 9000 words.

Land, Rights, Laws: Issues of Native Title is a multi-disciplinary series for short and condensed research papers that analyse emerging issues in native title. These papers are peer-reviewed by two independent experts. Preferred length is between 3500 and 7000 words.

Working papers is a new series that allows researchers and practitioners to publish preliminary findings, to share ideas about a topic or to elicit feedback. They are peer-reviewed by researchers and practitioners and start at 3500 words.

Research reports are the results of workshops, research projects and forums. They are peer-reviewed by two independent experts and generally start at 20,000 words.

Research monographs, books and edited volumes are published in a range of areas including land rights and native title. Peer-reviewed by two independent experts, the preferred length of these publications is between 50,000 and 90,000 words.
